REPORT OF THE BOARD

To the Commissioner of Education:

"Reading remains as one of the few personal individual activities whereby we can approach our full stature of mind and spirit." The record of performance and achievement in the Division of Public Libraries during the past year would indicate that, despite the television revolution, reading is standing up well under its onslaught. Facts and figures on Massachusetts and its public library service for 1950 as compiled by this Division from annual reports submitted by the public libraries also point up that, though television may have been reflected in some libraries by a decline in circulation, it will not doom reading as a lost art.

The Division carries 395 public libraries on its lists. Of these a few do not file any reports and others file incomplete ones. Reports from 92% of the public libraries reveal a 1950 state per capita public library income of $1.84, the number of volumes per capita in public libraries as 2.5, and the number of volumes circulated per capita in public libraries as 5.1. This $1.84 per capita library income for the state as a whole is a decidedly misleading figure. A statistical breakdown of public library figures shows that the per capita public library income of the 83 cities and towns in the Metropolitan Boston area is $2.32; and that it is $1.27 for the remaining 268 cities and towns outside the Metropolitan Boston area. These comparative figures prove that public library service in the majority of the state's cities and towns is inadequate and sub-standard. The figures also offer conclusive evidence that state aid to public libraries in Massachusetts is needed as much in our Commonwealth as it is in states with a much lower over-all state per capita library income.

The three State Regional Library Centers now operated by this Division are supplementing the library services in 90 communities. Other areas of the state are in need of this same kind of "lift" for their library services. It was very disappointing indeed to have the Legislature refuse to recognize this need for extension of regional library services by disallowing the funds requested by the Board of Free Public Library Commissioners in the 1951-52 budget for state regional library services in the Cape Cod and Merrimac Valley areas.

The Western Massachusetts Library Federation, a two-year demonstration project in library cooperation financed by a special grant of $36,500 from Marshall Field and directed by the Division, was launched on October 1, 1950. The first nine months of the project have proven its worth in promoting and developing better library facilities for smaller communities. Adult education programs using books, films and transcriptions have been inaugurated. Story hours and instructions in the use of the Library have been introduced in the rural schools. In-service training for untrained librarians has been handled through a series of training meetings each devoted to a specific phase of library science. Various methods of financing this cooperative library venture after the withdrawal of the Field funds in 1952 are being carefully reviewed.

Massachusetts library leaders are watching closely the progress of S1452, the new Library Services Bill which has been introduced into the House and Senate. Under the terms of this Bill, as now written, the Division would get about $70,000 in Federal funds to promote a bigger and better program of library service to rural areas and to experiment with new types of cooperative library projects. The support of various influential organizations and groups on a state and local level is being sought for this library legislation.

In developing our threefold aim of giving advice, information and leadership in library matters, the entire staff has been encouraged and assisted materially by the cordial relations which are maintained within the Department of Education, with other State agencies, and with the personnel in libraries throughout the Commonwealth.
